

J.R. Roberts is a respected architect and long-time resident of Palm Springs who was elected to a four-year term on the City Council in November 2015.

Prior to his election, Roberts served on the Palm Springs Planning Commission and was the former Managing Director of the Palm Springs Art Museum's internationally renowned Architecture and Design Center. He also served as the Chairman of the museum's Architecture and Design Council and currently serves as Vice President of the Palm Springs Modern Committee. Roberts is well known in the world of architecture and design for preserving and restoring mid-century modern homes and buildings, including the City's famed Edris House, which Roberts extensively renovated and is now designated a Class One Historic Site.

Roberts attended UCLA and worked for individual clients before spending 12 years as a partner with Boccardo Roberts Architecture Design. Prior to moving to Palm Springs, Roberts served as Mayor and a member of the Sausalito City Council.

Roberts currently serves on the following City Subcommittees:

- Indian Canyon Drive Improvements
- Walk of Stars
- Non-motorized Transportation Plan (Bike Lanes)
- iHub/Coachella Valley Economic Partnership
- Water Conservation
- Special Events
- Audio/Visual System Upgrade
- Recognition of Lawrence Crossley
- 2016 Strategic Planning Retreat
